PROGRAM:

Pat McFarling introduced Dr. Craig Turner, President of Kentucky Wesleyan College, who was accompanied by his wife, Annette. Dr. Turner assumed his duties as KWC's president on June 1, having served previously as president of Catawba College and prior to that as president of Hardin-Simmons University. Dr. Turner presented a very thought-provoking program on the current state and future of higher education, not only in Owensboro, but nation-wide. He detailed six megatrends that he sees today for colleges and universities: rising costs for attending and operating, globalization, branding of colleges, technology, accountability, and demographics. Solutions he suggested include managing costs, collaboration between educational institutions, and collaborations with businesses, government, healthcare and primary school systems. KWC is celebrating its 60th year in Owensboro and Dr. Turner feels if we work together, we can move forward. He quoted Robert Browning: "Look up, advance, all now is possible."
